

Vladyslav

Young professional

- 22 y. o.
- Middle Java Developer
- Lviv, Ukraine

Bio

Vladyslav has started working early and has only worked in two companies. He got there from the first try; he thinks it's because he carefully selected where to apply and is generally good at writing CVs. Passively looks for a new job and has one or two version of the CV for any position. He doesn't want to spend time on manually adjusting the resume and would consider it only if the position is interesting enough. He would like to have a tool that automatically changes his resume as his experience grows.

I don't think I have any difficulties writing CVs. I composed one several years ago and improve it since then.

I have an impression that job search is a competition for how good you lie.

GOALS

- Find a new job without extra efforts

PAINS AND FRUSTRATIONS

- Applications are left unanswered, the reason for rejection is unclear
- Application process is long and exhaustive - several rounds of interviews and test tasks take a lot of time

NEEDS

- Structured representation (storage) of his evolving experience

FEELINGS

- Satisfied with his current position, would not mind finding a new one
- Irritated by irrelevant proposals from HRs
- Feels that he owns the job search process and is not worried about his future

Searched for CV writing advice on the Internet; tried out ChatGPT; starts seeing patterns in screening stage and interviews.